THE Malaysian government's move to clear the overhang in luxu-rious high-rise homes by wooing foreigners would only be success-ful if the country is an attractive learning

Institute for Democracy and Economic Affairs senior fellow Dr Carmelo Ferlito believes Malaysia is an interesting place for foreigners. "The lower threshold of

RM600,000 for foreign ownerships will be more of interest for foreign residents/workers rather than investors, as it becomes easier to complete the settling down process with the possibility to buy cheaper properties. "For foreign investors, I believe they will remain on the high-value properties," he told The Malaysian Reserve (TMR).

Hestree (IAR). He added that there is a need to distinguish between foreign inves-tors and foreign residents/wor-kers, and proposed to maintain the threshold for investors, while completely liberalising the market for foreign workers/residents who have been working in Malaysia for a certain number of years. Asiacap Valuer & Property Con-sultants Sdn Bhd property valuer Kit Au Yong said Malaysia has its advantages in terms of social-cultural aspects. As a multiracial country with English as a second language, it makes it easier for foreign buyers to adapt.

"However, we have competition from destinations in the region such as Thailand, where it is easier to purchase homes in urban areas, affordable cost of living and a much more free-spirited environment more tree-spirited environment. "Singapore is also a good choice due to their safe, efficient and well-governed image, but the market caters for a much bigger budget. Further away, Australia will have more things to offer in terms of life-style and security, among others," he told TMR. Kit added, that. Malaucia in

Kit added that Malaysia is appealing to certain target markets, including the mid-budget purcha-sers who prefer an urban lifestyle in Kuala Lumpur (KL), Penang and Liber Bere Johor Baru.

He said the weak ringgit makes it affordable to foreigners to buy homes in Malaysia.

Paramount Property Sdn Bhd CEO Beh Chun Chong said Malaysia is an attractive destination to live, work and relax.

"For foreigners who are inte-rested in investing in Malaysia, they now have access to condominiums and apartments priced from RM600,000, instead of RM1 million upwards.

"Although Paramount Property does not have an overhang pro-blem, we foresee some easing of the overhang situation in the country with the lowering of floor price for foreigners. Whether or not it will boost foreign ownership is second-ary," he told TMR.

Beh said limiting the campaign to existing unsold units focuses on the goal of solving the problem and is a responsible way of managing inventories to ensure houses are furth held for locale firstly built for locals.

He, however, noted that deve-lopers will still have to work hard to market their products to locals and foreigners. Juwai.com KL based-executive Jurai.com KL based-executive chairman Georg Chmiel said the company's data show Malaysia is the fifth most popular destination for buyers from Hong Kong-China "Buyers from Hong Kong-China have a strong preference for Malay-sia and (the country) receives more buyer empiries than any other coun-buyer enquiries than any other coun-tries. Malaysia is also an appealing investment destination for buyers from nearby Singapore," he said. Chmiel added that Malaysia is Chmiel added that Malaysia is especially appealing to buyers motivated by lifestyle, retirement and education services. The Malaysia My Second Home Pro-gramme, affordable standards of living, high quality of life, medical facilities and accessible educa-tional institutions, all contribute to the country's appeal, he said. Chmiel also said buyers from mainland China purchased RM9.5 billion worth of Malaysian resi-dential and commercial properties

dential and commercial properties last year, with more than four-fifths of the investment in the residential sector.
